The witness showed considerable lands of memory as to what he had tentiled in the deposition of the day previous. On cross-examination Alley said he did not think he had said Burke was creay. He had said sluvies was creay. He had sender seen in the defendent any peculiarities that bertained in his liborytes, and he had sixty's remembered and paid. He had never seen in the defendent any peculiarities that bertained in his liborytes, and the defendent any peculiarities that the defendent any peculiarities and the defendent any pecul sent for earlier, arrived with his physician, and was sworn. Mr. Alley said he had been a locomotive engineer and lately a bar-keeper at the Allem Hotel, life had known Burke, twenty years, saw him overy day when he came in for a drink shortly after 6 o'clock.

Defendant took a big drink of whiskey, mixed in a lemonade glass, equal to two drinks. He always took one, and sometimes two glasses. He usually bought a half-pint of whiskey also. He often brought back empty flasks of a kind not sold by the witness.

Witness said Burke looked to him like a man who was losing his mind—like was now erratic, and seemed to be possessed of hallucinations, and thore was now erratic, and seemed to be possessed of hallucinations, and thore was now erratic, and seemed to be possessed of hallucinations, and thore was now erratic, and seemed to be possessed of hallucinations, and thore was now erratic, and seemed to be possessed of hallucinations, and thore was now erratic, and seemed to be possessed of hallucinations, and thore was now erratic, and seemed to be possessed of hallucinations, and thore was now erratic, and seemed to be possessed of hallucinations, and thore was now erratic and unpleasant man.
